Taking a Stand for the Sabbath - What are Adventists supposed to do when an eloquent and influential person writes something that they believe contradicts the Bible?

That was the question that Australian Adventists faced when the Australian Bible Society ran a commentary in its influential newspaper questioning Sabbath observance. Little did they expect that their solution - to submit a counter-commentary - would be published in the same newspaper and start a discussion.

The initial article, written by Michael Jensen, rector at St. Mark's Anglican Church in Sydney, uses Scripture and historical records to suggest that Christians began to observe Sunday in the New Testament but today can worship on any day of the week...
