

Back to the Basics

by Pastor Gene

We live in a world that is dominated by chaos. Most Americans, yes even Christian Americans, race through life like a rat in a maze with little or no time for deep, meaningful relationships with their neighbors, co-workers or “friends,” much less Jesus.

The problem with a rat race is that it is end-less, self-defeating, and at least from the rat’s perspective it is pointless. Like rats in pursuit of the ever-elusive cheese, the American lifestyle exhausts us and depletes both our physical and mental health to the point that when we do find some downtime we have little to no capacity to relate with others.

The American “rat race” even diminishes our ability to experience the beauty and blessing God intended us to discover in the weekly Sabbath. Most of us are so exhausted and our relationships are so neglected that by the time Sabbath rolls around all we can do (if we even have the energy to do this) is damage control.

But alas it is a new year. It is a time for resolutions and renewed commitments. What if we resolved to refocus our priorities in 2017? What if we committed to simplify our lives? What if we made the radical decision to live as counter culturally as the members of the first-century Christian Church?

As we embark on a new year as disciples of Jesus I would like to invite you to join me on a journey back to the basics. Each week as we come together in worship at Rockwood Adventist we are going to enter our study time in pursuit of the basics attributes of the faith that propelled Jesus’ original followers.

Along the way I am praying the Holy Spirit will create opportunities for each of us to take transformational steps toward discovering the gospel of rest awaiting us in Christ.
